Dr. Stephen B. Tallman
Dr. Timothy J. Barney has been named a Distinguished Educator for his outstanding contributions to excellence in education at the University of Richmond. Prof. Barney has been transforming the way students see the world from the moment he arrived at UR. Unfolding his expertise in the rhetoric of map-making for students, he guides them through the most circuitous and congested problems in international studies, from Cold War history to globalization to elections and revolutions. As he defines the borders of rhetorical and political knowledge, Dr. Barney’s students must also travel their own pathways to negotiate the terrain of rhetorical production and criticism. Students write campaign speeches, mailers, and press releases for political candidates at the same time that they analyze artifacts and rhetoric from actual campaigns. By teaching criticism alongside rhetorical production, Barney provides the directions for discovering the rhetorical constraints faced by working politicians, and they find themselves learning an ongoing lesson about the dynamic between theory and practice.

Dr. Kristin M.S. Bezio is an outstanding scholar, teacher and university citizen who embodies the University of Richmond’s ideal of an engaged and productive faculty member. Her innovative connections between Elizabethan culture and contemporary pop culture, her extended and successful collaboration with Henderson Middle School in the City of Richmond, and her enormous productivity as a scholar in multiple fields distinguish her as a unique and invaluable presence on our campus and in our students’ lives. As a teacher, Dr. Bezio’s has shown a clear commitment to rigor and creativity in teaching UR students. She regularly teaches one of the most challenging core classes in the Jepson School curriculum, “Critical Thinking,” and has developed and refined two continuing courses, “Leadership on Stage and Screen” and the First Year Seminar “Games, Game Theory, and Leadership Studies.” Of particular note is Dr. Bezio’s work in “Leadership on Stage and Screen,” integrating community-based learning by engaging students in helping Richmond city middle school students stage an actual production of one of Shakespeare’s plays. She is truly a Distinguished Educator.

Professor William O. Fisher exemplifies the teacher-scholar model of the University of Richmond. For his Corporate Governance course, he could not find a textbook that met his high standards, so he wrote his own...an 800-page book including careful and in-depth explanations of corporate governance scandals of the last twenty years. The book is a favorite of students and scholars alike. Throughout his tenure at the Law School, Professor Fisher has become known as a beloved and respected faculty member. His level of engagement with both teaching and students is extraordinary – he works constantly to perfect his classes, but still finds time to be available for students, going as far as conducting virtual office hours. As one student wrote, “Although he is always busy, he makes time for students. He is genuinely happy to lend an ear and to give a real, but somehow always optimistic, take on a situation.

Dr. Kasongo M. Kapanga is an exemplary member of the university community. He is described by a few student evaluations as “the rare talent to meet his students at whatever level they enter the classroom, and to encourage them with humor, care and respect.” And Dr. Kapanga accomplishes this feat in three different languages! This is just one of many ways that Dr. Kapanga has helped to internationalize UR’s curriculum. Dr. Kapanga makes extraordinary efforts for his students, and they go on to do extraordinary work. Kapanga has repeatedly taken on overloads up to 4 units a semester in order to teach Swahili because he was determined to help students continue making the progress necessary to participate in meaningful research projects. One such student started in Richmond, volunteering with Swahili-speaking refugees, and later moved on to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and assisted with bringing aid to the victims. This former student writes: “…Dr. Kapanga supported my passion and helped turn it into serious academic and intellectual interest, all without losing sight of the humanity of the work…”

Dr. M. Saif Mehakari joined the UR faculty in 2011 and has been awarded the Robins School Teaching Award, the Robins School Advising Award and the Omicron Delta Kappa Faculty Member of the Year Award. His classroom performance, pedagogy, and commitment to students are truly exceptional. His teaching focuses on rigor and preparation. He pushes students to think broadly and is dedicated to motivating them to learn. His dedication to students outside the classroom is equally evident. He is serving as a faculty advisor for independent honors research and as a co-coordinator of the mathematical economics major, which requires substantial cooperation between the Economics and Mathematics Departments. Professor Mekhari also helps with coordination, advising, and development of advising materials for the Undergraduate Women in Economics Initiative.

Dr. Carol Parish is a campus and national leader for the effective integration of teaching and research as demonstrated by her work in the Integrated Quantitative Science (IQS) and Science Math and Research Training (SMART) courses as well as in disciplinary Chemistry courses. Her commitment to the involvement of students in outcome-oriented research has led to transformative learning experiences for dozens of UR students. Her passion and effectiveness for increasing diversity and inclusion within STEM fields is particularly noteworthy. Her students come to understand and appreciate the latest scientific breakthroughs, and they have gone on to contribute their own at conferences, as Goldwater and Gates scholars, and as doctoral students at Berkeley, Columbia, Stanford, and Wisconsin and many other superb institutions. Students describe Prof. Parish as a “role model” who impacted their lives and careers long after they left UR. Prof. Parish’s work as an educator reveals on a daily basis the power of undergraduate research for both education and the production of new knowledge.

Dr. Ellen M. Walk has been a major leader and role model in teaching and learning in the School of Professional and Continuing Studies, resulting in high impact in course development, community-based learning pedagogy, community-based research projects, innovative curriculum redesign, mentorship and significant engagement of students in scholarly and creative work. Through her joint appointment with the Robins School of Business, Dr. Walk has made DEA-worthy contributions to that school as well. Manifesting a broad bandwidth of knowledge and expertise in her discipline—information systems—Dr. Walk has taught eleven different courses and one internship ranging from Systems Analysis & Design to Critical Thinking & Analysis. All eleven of these courses she designed and developed herself. Dr. Walk has taught two courses with short-term embedded study abroad in Panama and Seville. For the Panama study abroad in 2012, she was given a grant from the Carole Weinstein Endowment and was the recipient of the International Education Faculty Award from the UR Office of International Education. In 2015, she was honored during Westhampton College’s Senior Celebration by a student leader as one of the two faculty or staff mentors who most influenced that student during her time at the University of Richmond.
Dr. Jonathan W. Whitaker joined the Richmond faculty in 2007. Dr. Whitaker demonstrates an exceptional dedication to student success. He approaches teaching with an unfailingly positive attitude and commitment to excellence. Remarkably, he has won all four major honors in the Robins School of Business: the Teaching Award, the Outstanding MBA Professor Award, the Service Award, and the Research Award. Dr. Whitaker teaches courses in the undergraduate and MBA programs, mentors the MBA Capstone projects, and teaches workshops for Career Services and Executive Education. His teaching incorporates elements of experiential learning and community involvement with students working on projects for community organizations. Thus, his contributions extend beyond the confines of the classroom. Dr. Whitaker played a leadership role in designing the Consulting Track curriculum and its cornerstone course, the Consulting Process and Practicum. He serves as a faculty mentor for all students in the track.
Colonel Leo K. and Gaylee Thorsness Endowed Chair in Ethical Leadership—Created in 2004 and funded by a gift from W. Thomas Matthews in honor of Colonel Thorsness, United States Air Force (retired), who was a prisoner of war in Vietnam and received the Medal of Honor for extraordinary heroism. The purpose of this chair is to recruit and employ a stellar faculty member in the Jepson School of Leadership Studies who will teach students about the benefits and characteristics of ethical leadership. The current chair holder is Dr. J. Donelson R. Forsyth, Professor of Leadership Studies, who is a strong researcher who writes in the area of the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning and group dynamics.

Coston Family Chair in Leadership & Ethics—In 1989, Mr. and Mrs. Otis D. Coston Jr. of McLean, Virginia, parents of two University of Richmond alumni, initiated the Coston Family Chair in Leadership and Ethics to enable faculty in the Jepson School of Leadership Studies to explore the ethical dimension of leadership and related ethics. The current chair holder is Dr. Terry L. Price, Professor of Leadership Studies and PPEL, who specializes in leadership ethics and psychology. Dr. Price has spent almost twenty years addressing the moral challenges of leadership.

E. Claiborne Robins Chair in Liberal Arts—In 1985, then-President E. Bruce Heilman and the Board of Trustees announced the creation of the E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished University Chair, the largest endowed chair in University of Richmond history. The chair was designed to attract to the University nationally and internationally distinguished professors, scholars, lecturers, administrators, business leaders, lawyers, scientists, or those accomplished in the arts, humanities, theology or public service. The current chair holder is Dr. Lazaro Lima, Professor of Latin American and Iberian Studies and American Studies.

E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished Professorship in Business—In 1985, then-President E. Bruce Heilman and the Board of Trustees announced the creation of the E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished University Chair, the largest endowed chair in University of Richmond history. The chair was designed to award an individual with exceptional talent and distinction, whose scholarship and teaching make that person a model of accomplishment for other members of the University, the Robins School faculty, and for the profession nationally. The current chair holder is Dr. Stephen Tallman, Professor of Management, who is a strong researcher in the field of global strategy. Dr. Tallman was honored as a Fellow of the Strategic Management Society and the Academy of International Business.

George & Sallie Cutchin in Camp Professor of Bible—The Camp Bible Chair was established in 1925 by James Leonidas Camp (University trustee from 1900-1925) and Paul and Douglas Camp in honor of their parents, George and Sallie Cutchin Camp. The current chair holder is Dr. L. Stephanie Cobb, Professor of Religion. Her current research interests focus on the interrelationship among paganism, Judaism, and Christianity in the first and second centuries.

James Thomas Professor in Philosophy—Established in 1881 in memory of Dr. James Thomas, who was a tenured Professor of Philosophy at the University of Richmond. The current chair holder is Dr. Geoff C. Goddu, Professor of Philosophy. His current research interests focus on the philosophy of language, mind, logic, and science fiction.

MacEldin Trawick Professor in Psychology—The MacEldin Professorship was established in 2002 with gifts from University of Richmond alumni MacEldin Trawick. The current chair holder is Dr. Cindy Bukach, Associate Professor of Psychology. Her research focuses on the challenge of dissemination and implementation of best practices in cognitive neuroscience at the undergraduate level.
S. D. Roberts & Sandra Moore Professor of Law – Established by Roberts Moore, L’61 and a member of the University of Richmond’s Board of Trustees and Richmond’s Law Advisory Board, and his wife, Sandra. The professorship was intended to acknowledge a faculty member of outstanding caliber in scholarship and teaching. The current chair holder is Professor Corinna Lain, Professor of Law. Professor Lain is a constitutional law scholar who writes about the influence of extralegal norms on Supreme Court making, with a special focus on the field of capital punishment.

William Binford Vest Chair of History – Around 1930, Mr. Vest’s wife, Elizabeth Morrow (Bettie) Vest, bequeathed to the University of Richmond to establish the William Binford Vest Chair of History in memory of her husband. Mr. Vest was an excellent businessman, generous with his time and money, and joined the Board of Trustees of the University of Richmond in 1917 and retained the position until his death in 1924. The current chair holder is Dr. Robert C. Kenzer, Professor of History and American Studies. His research interests examine the impact of the Civil War particularly on the American South and the impact of the Civil War on Richmond’s business community.
